INDIVIDUAL, SOCIAL & GLOBAL TRAUMA

- Systemic Perspective

While we often speak of trauma in the individual nervous system, or even in the family system, less attention is paid to what might be called the greater forces which shape individual lives, families and other larger systems. This integrative workshop experience will explore an ongoing, resonant and co-creative relationship between somatically oriented trauma methods and systemic constellation work which offers new windows of opportunity for a deeper understanding of our collective human condition, along with expanded options for healing broken connections and resolving hidden entanglements that may lead to traumatic repetitions throughout time and space.
