

Everyone is equal

Everyone is equal to everyone else insofar as the lives of all people were thought and tossed into existence by the same spirit-mind.

Whenever we behave as if it was up to us to decide which life is worth more or which human being has more rights, we violate this law of equality.

This has far-reaching consequences for our own health and that of other family members, especially for our children and grandchildren, and sometimes also for our partner. Bert Hellinger

The recent murder of a man of another colour by a police officer in Minneapolis has led to worldwide protest against the pandemic of deep-rooted racial inequality. The call for social distancing has been overridden by the call for social justice.

As Hellinger reminds us physical health ultimately depends on systemic health.

Paul Stoney
Chair

The world is in motion, items that have been suppressed for years come to the surface and ask to be seen and taken care of.

A worldwide crisis as the COVID pandemic is, and a trigger, a black man killed by a white policeman, that would otherwise maybe ignored was needed to set a big movement in progress, a movement that asks for the past to be acknowledged and lessons taken from it.

This is what we as constellators are trying to do with the constellation work on individual and collective level. Both are part of a global awareness that becomes more and more visible.

What is ISCA's role in this? As in the basics of constellation work, we do not exclude, we include all. I find it a pity I don't know many black constellators, I cannot tell if there are many from the ISCA member-list as we do not ask our members about their personal background, and to be clear, it is of no interest for ISCA, our aim is to join constellators from all over the world, let them share their experiences and learn from each other to improve the work, each in their own way.

ISCA Gathering Website

We have a dream of thriving together by living our diversity while being one. We branch out and we learn by sharing in a vibrant laboratory of humanity.

This dream is reflected in our newly launched website for our Gathering in Mexico in April 2021. Have a look and enjoy what's on offer by our members for our members:

ISCA's main Website

While we wait to see what emerges in the coming months for travel and conferences, we want to improve our membership website. The current membership website is out of date and has more and more issues as some of you have experienced.

So, we decided to move over to a new, modern package to give the members a better experience in modifying your profile and managing your membership. Part of the chosen package is the opportunity to create a sharing and learning platform, a place to interact with other members and to ask your questions.

We will keep you informed about our progresses here.

ISCA Gathering Program

We proudly present our Gathering program – it is so rich and exciting as it shows the vast variety of constellation approaches in the context of belonging.
